

JONATHAN FOGG.

JANUARY 3, 1832.

Mr. HUBBARD, from the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions, made the following REPORT:

The Committee on Revolutionary Pensions, to whom was referred the petition of Jonathan Fogg, at the present session, do concur in the following report, made at the last session, on the same petition, by the Committee on Military Pensions.

That the said petitioner enlisted in May, 1775, for the term of three months, in the company commanded by Captain Daniel Moore, and regiment commanded by Col. John Stark; was in the battle of Bunker Hill, and continued in service till July of the same year.

The last of July, 1775, the petitioner enlisted into the company commanded by Captain Henry Dearborn, and marched from Cambridge, Massachusetts, under command of Benedict Arnold, to the mouth of Kennebeck river, thence to its head, and from thence to the plains of Abraham. During this march, the petitioner and his comrades suffered severely from cold and hunger, and were compelled to feed upon the flesh of dogs. On the 31st of December, 1775, the petitioner was one of the soldiers, under command of said Arnold, who made the assault upon Quebec, in which he was wounded and taken prisoner, and, as such, was confined more than nine months, and was finally exchanged and discharged in October, 1776. The last enlistment was in the continental line, under which he served, and was a prisoner, about 14 months. The petitioner is entirely destitute of property.

The evidence of the foregoing statements was filed in the War Department on the fourth day of April, 1828; but the petitioner was not placed on the pension list at the War Department, because the construction of the law at that department does not recognize imprisonment as service. The committee are of opinion that the petitioner is entitled to a pension from the fourth of April, 1828.
